Guards to Move Into Strike Torn Coal Mine Area

WHITESBURG, Ky. (AP)—Adj. Gen. J. B. Williams of the Kentucky National Guard begins a tour of strike-bound coalfields today with guardsmen ready to move at his call.

Gov. A. B. Chandler said Williams would visit trouble spots in seven counties of eastern Kentucky where two men have been killed at nonunion coal mines.

Chandler mobilized two National Guard battalions after the death Thursday night of James O. Adams, 40, a coal-truck driver and part-time mine guard.

Adams was killed in an exchange of gunfire with members of the United Mine Workers at the Little Shepherd Mine near here. Three UMW members, including one shot in the stomach during the fight, were charged with murder. The union said before the Guard was alerted that it was abandoning a peace agreement made with operators last Saturday.

Carson Hibbits, president of UMW District 30, charged the operators did not act in good faith when the agreement was signed. In turn, operator Stanley Collins of Hazard said: "We were not taken in by the treaty."

Chandler said Williams has full authority to move the troops into the area if he feels it necessary. He said meanwhile the two battalions totaling more than 600 men will stay in readiness.

Adams' death followed by 18 days that of nonunion coal operator Woodrow Smith. Smith was shot down near his small mine in Knox County. Five UMW members have been indicted for murder in the death and two others charged as accessories.

Coal strike for higher pay began March 9.

Says South to Fare Better Under the GOP

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.) predicted today the South would fare better under a Republican administration headed by Vice President Nixon than under a Democratic President influenced by National Chairman Paul Butler.

"The general feeling among Republicans is to let the states handle segregation," the outspoken Goldwater said. "If there was violence, of course, that would be another matter."

Goldwater said Butler and other northern Democrats have told the South to get out if it doesn't agree with national party policies, while the GOP believes in states rights and individual freedom.

"Nixon is a conservative," Goldwater told a Republican breakfast in this stronghold of Democrats and states rights. "I like Nixon and think he has more to offer."

Goldwater advised his hearers not to blame the Republicans for the Supreme Court's integration decision.

"A great majority of the Senate Republicans are not happy with the present court," he said. "My personal opinion is that this is not a good court."

Goldwater said there were a majority of Democrats on the court which handed down the integration decision and said he had told the President he did not approve the selection of Earl Warren as chief justice because he "hasn't practiced law in 25 years, has never been a judge and is a socialist."

He said "I don't think he liked it."

Goldwater said the Republicans had made mistakes and he disagreed with the use of troops at Little Rock, Ark., in the school integration dispute.

"I think former Atty. Gen. Brownell would have to take most of the blame for that, and I think Adams' some too," he said.

"Adams had an effect on the President that was not healthful to the Republicans."

Jobless Pay in Arkansas Down

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Unemployment compensation payments were going to 11,336 Arkansians at the end of March—a reduction of 3,871 from the previous month's figure.

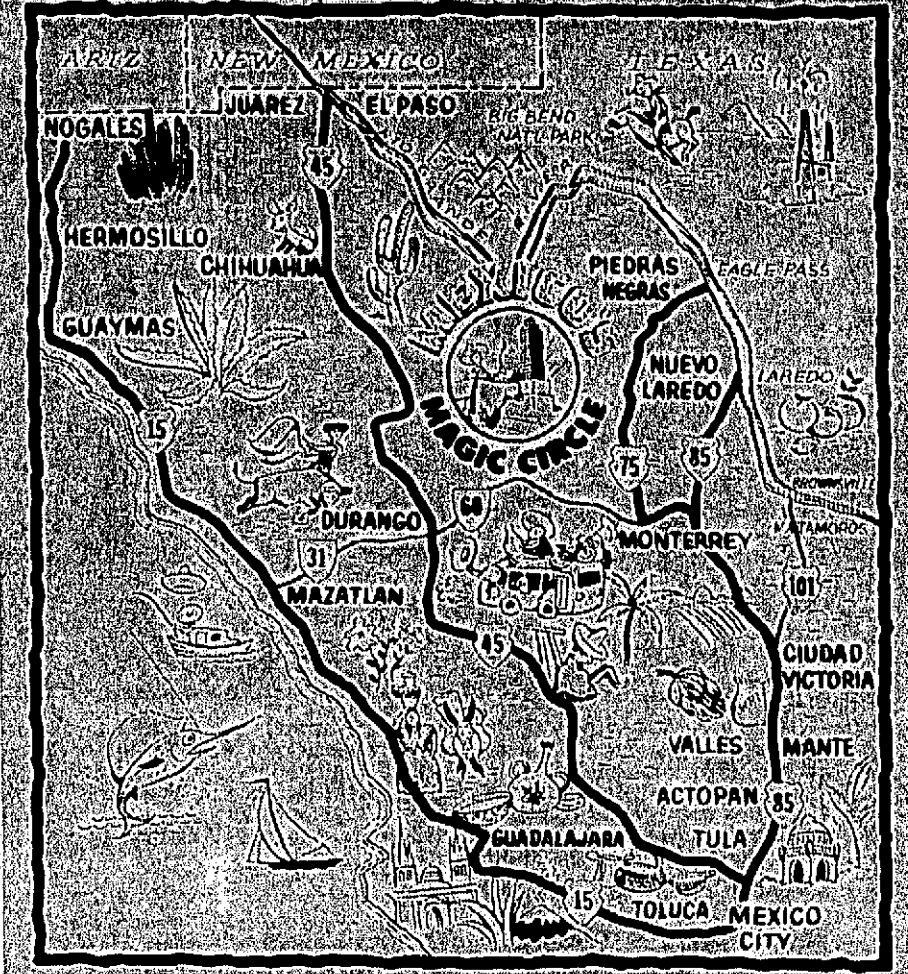

Employment Security Administrator J. L. Bland said unemployment payments totaled $1,100,479 in March, $342,096 less than in March 1958.

Bland said the ESD made 6,442 placements in March, the highest total for March since 1955.

Three Magnificent Highways Link U. S. A. and Mexico, Land of Cathedrals and Mountains

OUR GOOD NEIGHBORS, the Republic of Mexico, is tied to the United States by three ribbons of paved, good international highways that form a giant Magic Circle of excitement, adventure and new experiences. Whether you enter or leave this colorful land from Texas or Arizona, the trip will acquaint you with the real fun of the open road.

Editor's Note: This is the 20th in a series of suggested highway tour maps which Hope Star is publishing weekly. The series will cover the South and Southwest during the winter months, and the Northern sections in the spring. This is excellent material to cut out and paste up in a scrapbook for future reference when planning your vacation trip.

By EDWARD COLLIER

Yesterday and today meet in Mexico, tied to us by three ribbons of paved international highways. In our good neighbor-land, the ocean gullies the plains and the ultra modern glass skyscraper are an accepted contradiction.

These highways form a giant Magic Circle in this ageless land of snow-capped mountains, valleys pink with flowers, modern resorts, golden cathedrals, tropical jungles, Indian villages, smart shops and native stores, bullfights, fiestas.

Armchair planning is always fun, but it's essential when you get the urge to see Mexico. It takes a certain amount of reading to appreciate the ancient Aztec and Mayan ruins; the significance of fiestas; to understand the alternately gay and moody people — and the marks that conquest and revolution have left on the land.

Highway maps of Mexico are one of my favorite brands of literature, too; they offer the excitement of conjecture that new names and places bring.

Good News Today

This brings up the inevitable question of all who consider driving to Mexico City: "What about the food enroute — is the water and milk safe?" Will that gasoline work in my high compression engine? "What will the roads do to my new car?"

There need be no worries about food; to me, Mexico's is tempting and delicious. It still is a good idea to shy away from fresh vegetables and eat only fruits that are peeled — the papayas, pineapples and melons are a real treat. Bottled water is available every place; American-type carbonated drinks are at almost every stop. Pasteurized milk is abundant in the cities.

And you don't have to worry about your engine pinging or overheating. Recently a new high octane gasoline, designed for high compression engines, has appeared in many service stations along the main highways and in major tourist areas. You can spot it by the green and white pumps — the government owns the one oil company in Mexico (Pemex). Good oils, tires and accessories are available at an increasing number of U.S. style service stations. New American type motels also are springing up all along the highways.

The eastern arc of your Magic Circle tour of Mexico is the Pan American highway. They told us at the border that the 751 miles from Laredo, Texas to Mexico City could be made in one day.

"Of course," the customs inspector added sadly, "you won't be able to stop anywhere." Reassured we didn't want to whiz through his beautiful land without really seeing it, he waved us on our way with a cheery, "Hasta luego."

Take It Easy

The climate, altitude and scenery are conducive to relaxing, relaxing and just taking it easy — requisites for a real vacation. For the Mexican there are 365 days, and as many fiestas, when the

Attorney Named for State PSC

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Loranza D. Blair, 38, a Paris attorney was appointed yesterday as attorney for the Public Service Commission.

He shifted to the PSC from the Workers' Compensation Commission, where he had been a referee for the past four years.

Blair was succeeded as WCC referee by former Circuit Judge Ernest Manner, 45, of Benton, who was defeated for re-election last summer after serving eight years.

The PSC attorney's job has been open since Claude Carpenter Jr. resigned last fall to enter private law practice and become an aide to U. S. Rep. Dale Alford.

Blair is a former state representative from Logan County.

Maximum salary for the PSC job is $10,000 annually. The WCC referee's pay is $6,000.

Dulles Never Achieved His Big Objective

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP)—When John Foster Dulles took office as secretary of state six years ago his avowed purpose was to "wrest the initiative" from the Soviet Union and put the United States and its allies on the offensive in the cold war. He never succeeded in achieving this major objective.

Soon after he was sworn in, he found himself caught up in a tide of crises that ran throughout his crowded years in the State Department. His major contributions to the development of U.S. foreign policy have been, with few exceptions, on the defensive side of cold war strategy.

Foremost among his accomplishments, perhaps the vast expansion he engineered in United States alliances and military commitments over the world. He inherited the North Atlantic Alliance, which he hoped to create, from his predecessor, Dean Acheson. But building on the coalition pattern thus established, he extended U.S. commitments in the Middle East to such a degree that Soviet-Chinese communism can hardly thrust out in any direction now without risking U.S. retaliation.

In the course of making the new commitments Dulles developed a technique which solved a difficult problem in the conduct of U.S. foreign policy.

By getting advance authority from Congress, he eliminated a potential weakness which, in a moment of crisis, might have prevented the President from taking effective action.

Such a crisis arose last year when revolution overthrew the pro-Western government of Iraq. Dulles and Eisenhower feared that other friendly regimes would topple like a row of dominoes, beginning with Lebanon and Jordan. Against threats of Soviet counteraction the President dispatched U.S. troops to Lebanon and British forces went into Jordan to save both countries from possible falling into unfriendly hands.

Dulles was in international hot water for a time last year with his insistence on supporting Na-

New Chamber Committees Are Listed

The following is a list of Chamber of Commerce Committees for the year of 1959 as announced by John L. Wilson, president of the organization.

Seeks Data on Some Old Sayings

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Is a cucumber really cool? Does anyone actually get warm as toast? Are a redhead's lips as hot as song and fable tell us?

To find the answers to such questions a test-engineering team, with a newsmen's help, applied scientific know-how to many a familiar saying and analogy.

It was done with devices for taking temperatures in all sorts of places.

Put to serious purposes, the toaster is a boon to business and industry. It was developed by Leeds and Northrup Co., makers of electrical goods.

Tests showed a cucumber was anything but cool as the old saw suggests. Inside it tested at 60.9 degrees, its skin 71.6.

Nobody could be as warm as toast is at first — 167 degrees. Within a few minutes, the temperature drops to 78 or 79, but veteran countermen say that isn't what's meant by warm toast.

Ever wonder just how hot that news is rolling fresh and fragrant off the presses? Typical front page temperature was 82. This was 3 to 10 degrees above room temperature.

As for a redhead's lips, a sampling taken outdoors on a mild day fluttered to only 92 degrees.

The hottest jazz that a radio station could play was somewhat less than a scorching 85. A cold chisel tested in an unheated hardware store was 74.3, a bit less than a degree warmer than straight vodka taken in a bar where the mercury averaged 76.

All efforts to test a cool million failed. The bankers were too conservative.

State Hospital to Move 285 Patients

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Arkansas State Hospital will move 285 patients from a 53-year-old building at Little Rock to temporary quarters at the Benton and Baumcutter units.

Dr. Granville Jones, hospital superintendent, called the building to be vacated "quite a fire hazard." The Board of Control voted yesterday to transfer the patients pending construction of a maximum security building at Little Rock.

Jones said the old building, a three-story brick and frame structure, would be inspected by engineers to determine whether it should be renovated or demolished. Two wards in the old building housed children, and five were occupied by adult male patients.

The board employed a Little Rock architectural firm to draw preliminary plans for the maximum security building. Jones said the board would study the preliminary plans at a May 19 meeting.

Tibet Leader Accuses China of Interference

By HENRY BRADSHAW

TEZPUR, India (AP)—The Dalai Lama declared today he came to India "of my own free will" and accused Red China of interfering in Tibetan affairs. He repudiated Communist claims that he was kidnapped by Tibetan rebels.

The 23-year-old, god-kingly emerged from the wild Himalayas riding in a jeep. He smiled and waved to the crowd that greeted his royal retinue partly crossing his royal refuge party crossing into uncharted India from the forbidden northeast frontier territory.

The ruler, in a statement issued through the Indian government, accused the Peking government of interfering in Tibetan affairs despite the 1951 agreement that Tibet would enjoy full autonomy.

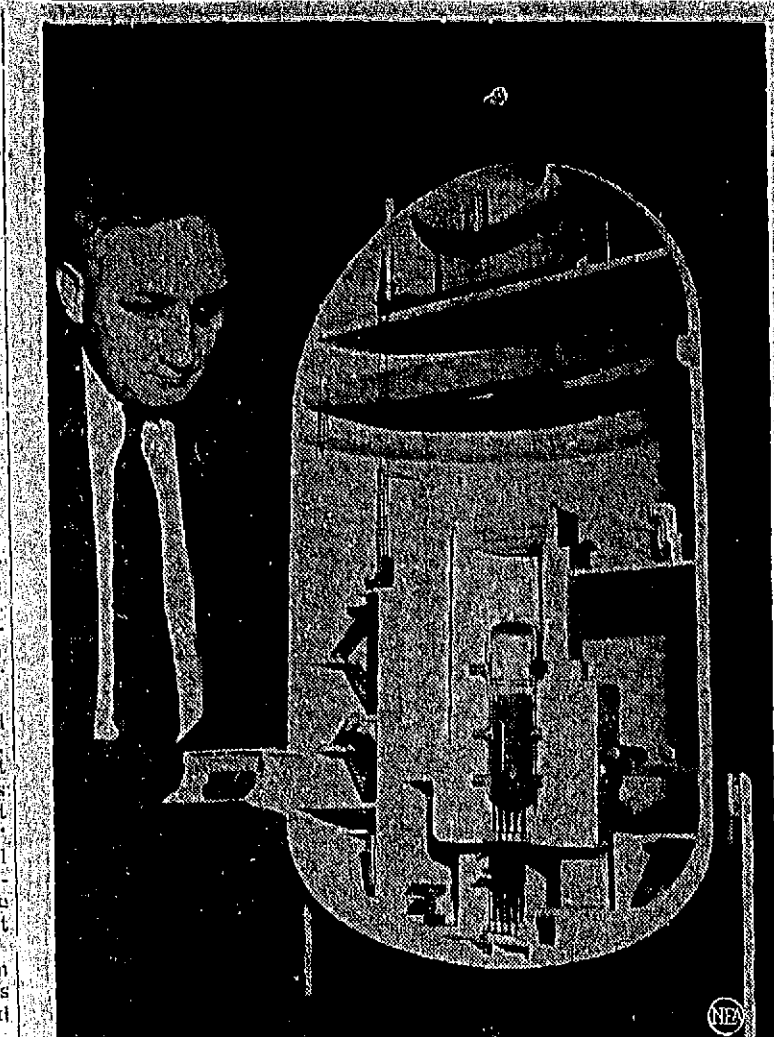

The Dalai Lama fled his capital of Lhasa in 1959 when the Chinese Communists moved in to take over Tibet and went to an outpost on the border.

He ordered to return to Lhasa in 1961 only after getting Red China's promise to respect his spiritual and temporal status.

The Chinese Communists ousted the Dalai Lama's government when he fled a month ago lurching off an uprising against the Reds and installed the Panchen Lama, as ruler.

After crossing treacherous mountain paths by muleback and foot, the royal refugee party of 80 crossed into the state of Assam this morning riding in 15 jeeps.

From Tezpur the Dalai Lama will board a special train to take him to the home-in-exile provided by the Indian government in Mussoorie, a hill town north of New Delhi.

ATOMIC POWER FOR MINNESOTA — Dr. Marshall G. Holloway examines model of first U.S. rural co-operative nuclear reactor. The 22,000-kilowatt reactor, a closed-cycle boiling water type, will be built for the Rural Co-operative Power Association of Elk River, Minn., under an Atomic Energy Commission contract. It will furnish electric power to 40,000 users in Minnesota. Dr. Holloway is president of Nuclear Products.

You Can Discover More Than Alice Did in Wonderland by Visiting Your Public Library

By MARY ANITA LASTER

The little girl named Alice, created by Lewis Carroll, found a wonderland of strange and marvelous things. She went through a looking glass to make her discovery. Alice we can take a trip along paths which lead to new places, new people, and new excitement in a much more conventional way.

Opening the doors of your public library can be like opening a new world before your eyes. In 1958 former presidents Herbert Hoover and Harry S. Truman issued a message which, in part, contained these words: "Men die; devices change; success and fame run their course. But within the walls of even the smallest library in our land lie the treasures, the wisdom, and the wonder of man's greatest adventures on this earth."

In this age of space-conscious individuals and nations that statement should not be limited by the use of the word, "earth."

Indeed, some of the favorite books for young and old alike are those about "other worlds" of other imagination or fact. These are nothing new, though the facts supporting them may have been recently proved. Look at some of the writings of H. G. Wells to see what I mean.

It has been said that a good book is a good influence on a good life. Most of us began early to know that a "story book" was something we liked, and we have all had the experience of begging someone who was miles tall to become our size and "Read to me." Whether it was the result of parents, other relatives, or friends, an introduction to the marvels within the binding of a book has, no doubt, had its influencing effect on our lives.

News of the formation of a Hempstead-Nevada Regional Library was learned about a month ago. Already a selection of books for the initial book collection has begun, and purchase of the books will begin this summer. The regional library with its bookmobile will serve a population of 39,869 and an area of 1,831 square miles. The bookmobile will be purchased and ready to operate by the time school starts in September.

Such a project as the Regional Library Bookmobile is an example of modern expansion of age-old wealth, so that even more people can find the fortunes that are ready and waiting for those who seek them at a library. This has been National Library Week, and though that statement is being made at its conclusion, any time is the perfect time to start reading those books you've been meaning to for years. Get them at your local library, or visit your bookseller and start out to your home library.

Taylor Caldwell, Associated Press writer, stated in a column which appeared in this paper a few days ago that man's greatest monument is the book. The written word is man's noblest invention.

Production of Steel Up, U. S. Reports

By NORMAN WALKER

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government says steel industry productivity has been declining but now is on an upturn. The announcement, aimed both at management and steel labor by bargaining ammunition for contract talks next month.

The Labor Department reported the industry's output per man-hour declined nearly 6 per cent in the three years 1955-58 period. That time closely paralleled duration of expiring three-year labor contracts.

On the other hand, Ewan Clague, the department's statistics commissioner, said steel productivity started climbing steeply late last year and is still rising. This hasn't been officially measured yet.

The figures announced Thursday gain importance from the stress given productively by President Eisenhower. He has repeatedly recommended that any wage increases be held to productivity gains to avoid inflation.

On that basis, the steel industry could argue that a three-year decline in productivity warrants a wage cut rather than a pay raise the United Steelworkers Union has said it will demand.

The union already has indicated that currently rising output per man and rising steel profits should be the basis on which labor contracts are negotiated.

Present contracts run out June 30. Negotiations are scheduled to start in New York on May 18 but the union recently suggested advancing them to May 4. The industry responded it is ready any time.

Proposals by the industry for a wage freeze and then by the union for a price freeze both have been rejected.

Productivity is the relation of production to the work hours needed in achieving it. It varies widely. In steel, productivity has increased as much as 28 per cent in one year and declined as much as 9 per cent in another.

Military Building Bill Approved

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House has approved a bill which authorizes spending $1,253,000,000 for military construction projects in this nation and foreign lands.

The measure, now facing Senate action, provides mainly for public works and housing construction at service bases.

Arkansas authorizations in the bill are:

Blytheville Air Force Base—$1,098,000 for maintenance, supply and troop housing facilities and 7½ million dollars for Capehart housing units.

Little Rock Air Force Base — $2,323,000 for operational, maintenance, operational facilities for the Arkansas Air National Guard and $325,000 for operational facilities for the Air Force.

Armed Prisoners Continue to Hold 21 Hostages

By JACK ZYGMOND

DEER LODGE, Mont. (AP)—Armed convicts whose dangerous whims threaten to touch off a riotous burst against 21 helpless hostages rounded the Montana State Prison today.

About 175 armed officers patrolled the gray sandstone walls of the prison and waited nervously for some gesture of conciliation.

Warden Floyd Powell was taking captive and later released in the rebellion, when his assistant was slain. Powell termed the night's uneasy peace "a sort of swarming out." He expressed hope that hunger might force the rebels into negotiation or surrender.

The prison stocks food for three days for the 435 convicts. The riot began at the dinner hour Thursday. Powell said about five or six prisoners apparently are the ring leaders. How many others are participants thus not been determined.

Jerry Myles, a burglar with a long record, has been speaking for the rioters through a loudspeaker system. His voice rang clearly through the 90-year-old prison and outside the walls throughout the day, demanding improved conditions and the resignation of Benjamin Wright, director of the Montana Board of Pardons.

Wright, 42, disclosed Friday he had submitted his resignation three weeks ago. He said it was effective immediately in the hope it might expedite a truce.

The rioters killed Deputy Warden Theodore "Pop" 40, and stabbed guard William Cox, 41, when they seized control.

They also took hostage 17 guards, prison sociologist Walter Jones, 24, and five inmates. The latter apparently are stool pigeons.

Jones and guard Chris Flanagan were released Friday along with two ill convicts who were not among the hostages.

Pittkin said the rioters apparently took pity on him. He is a diabetic. He said he was on the verge of a coma when the convicts allowed him to "walk through the courtyard to freedom."

"They mean business," said Pittkin. "They're not fooling."

Jones, less than a year out of college, acted as a go-between twice during the day to carry messages to the warden. The first time he was instructed to return to the cellophane under threat of death to the other hostages. No such threat was made the second time.

"The other fellows (the hostages) are all set up to be killed," he said after emerging the first time. "The inmates are tough. Any little thing will set it off."

He said the hostages are being kept two to a cell in one of the two main cellophane. He said they have been treated well.

Stand Helped Industry, Texans Told

MARSHALL, Tex. (AP)—Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus told a cheering crowd of Marshall Jaycees last night that the South's stand on states rights had helped the flow of industry into the area.

Faubus, a key figure in the segregation controversy over since he used National Guard troops to keep Negroes out of Little Rock Central High School, said the industrial growth of his state has continued despite racial troubles.

"This indicates," Faubus told an annual Junior Chamber of Commerce banquet, "that all industrialists are not in accord with the U.S. Supreme Court on the integration question."

Faubus received a standing ovation at the end of the 90-minute speech.

The governor told the gathering he had received over 1,000 letters from Texans who wanted him to run for president.

Faubus flew today to Dallas where he planned to take part in Arkansas Day at the Dallas Trade Fair. He will spend the weekend at the home of an unidentified friend near Houston.

Ex-Miss Arkansas Weds Pro Cager

CONWAY, Ark. (AP)—Barbara Banks, a former Miss Arkansas, was married here Wednesday to pro basketball player Frank Selvy. The bride was Miss Arkansas in 1956 and was a entrant in the talent division of the Miss America Pageant that year. She has been a model in New York.

Selvy starred in basketball at Furman University and now is a member of the New York Knicks' backcourt of the National Basketball Assn.

The ceremony was performed at St. Joseph Catholic Church here. The couple plan to live in Greenville S.C.

nationalist China in its defense of the Chinese coastal islands. Quesada and Dulles, against the attack, Britain was especially fearful that Dulles might lead the United States into an unwanted war in the Far East. He was confident, however, that if American determination was clearly to the Chinese, they would not attempt to invade the islands. In the end, his judgment seemed to be borne out by their failure to press their campaign.

S. ROUNDER HIMSELF
Dulles was caught in the dread dilemma, as he saw it, of having to back this country's policy in an adventure of which he thoroughly disapproved or having to denounce their action and see the Atlantic coalition split wide open.

He chose the latter course and was immediately put into the unenviable position of siding with the Soviet Union in the United Nations against Britain and France. It took a year to restore the friendly Allied relationship.

Child Dies in Fire Near Newport

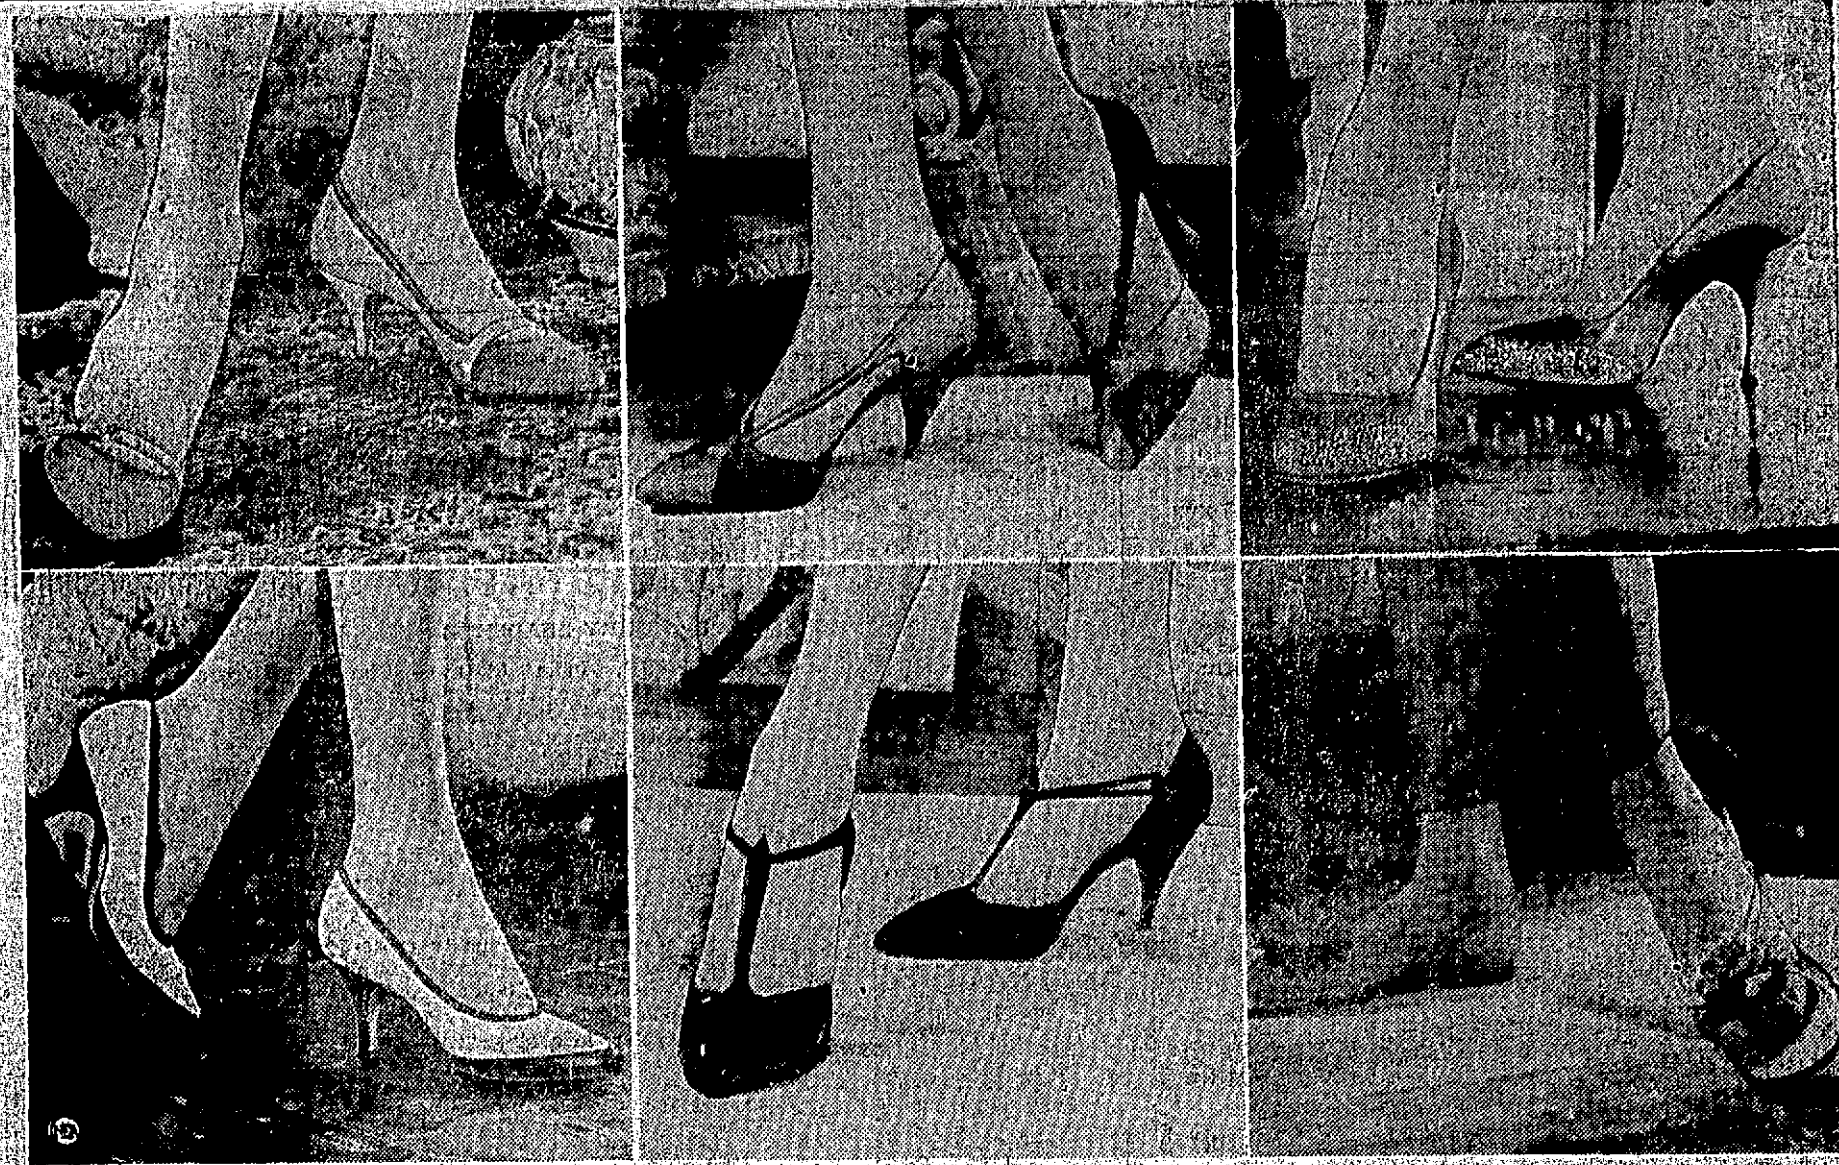

NEWPORT, Ark. (AP)—Fire destroyed a small farm house near Newport early today, killing a 2-month-old girl. Four other persons in the house suffered serious burns.

Dead is Beekie Ann Lewallen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donnie Lewallen. Her 19-year-old mother and the mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Roberts, 44 and 43 respectively, and Roy Lynn Roberts, 12, uncle of the child, were hospitalized at Little Rock. All were reported in a critical condition, except Ralph Roberts. His condition was considered serious but not critical.

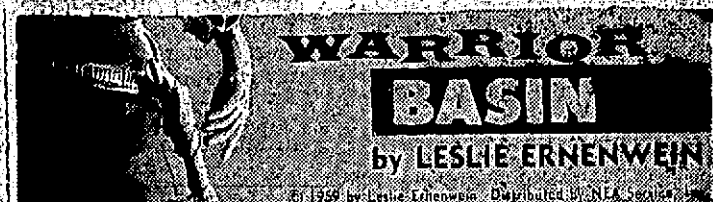

Donnie Lewallen, the father, was away from home when the fire broke out. He works as a service station attendant at night.

Neighbors said the Roberts couple, Mrs. Lewallen and Roy Lynn Roberts, escaped from the flaming house by climbing through a window. The baby's body was found in the charred ruins several hours later.

Origin of the fire was unknown. The house was located on state highway 10 about 10 miles south of Newport.

The tapered toe goes on into spring in sleek shoes often cut in a more open fashion. The newest way to an open look is through airy side and instep trimmings. The perfect daytime shoe for spring is this pump (upper left) with a narrow instep strap. It's done in two tones of turquoise and two leathers, brushed and smooth. Late day into evening shoe (upper center) is in two tones of green and a combination of calf and suede leathers. V-strap gives the shoe its airy look. Far Eastern influence shows in this pump (upper right) with an Oriental air. It has pointed toe slightly upturned and jeweled in the turquoise color of the shoe. That new patent leather that won't crack appears in this afternoon pump (lower center) with pointed toe and slim T-strap. At-home shoe is a thong sandal (lower right) in vivid shades of turquoise, orange, and blue. Leather dower picks up colors of the sandal and adds feminine look.

THE STORY: Jim Furlong has burned an Empire life camp in the retaliation for the burning of his cabin by Empire riders. Now he finds that like Rule has been wounded and that even he himself is out searching for Furlong.

Cleo Veto, flanked by Farley Breen and Joe Fenton, were following fresh footprints south of Empire's horse camp when they heard shooting somewhere east on them. Veto halted instantly, listening to the final report and waiting a moment before he announced, "Off to the Long Ridge. Come on!"

Veto ignored the horse tracks they had been following. Those tracks hadn't made sense heading east as they were, nor had the dead horse found near West Camp. A horse carrying the like Rule's brand.

Coldly, sharply, as was his habit, Veto had commanded his men to a strategic pattern of encirclement with a calm order to shoot Furlong on sight. There had been no doubt in his mind. At first, as they had burned West Camp, or that they would soon run him down. But with seven riders, at his disposal, Veto hadn't accomplished anything all day except shoot a nesters horse.

Veto, as they approached Long Ridge, pulled his pony to a sliding stop. "Spread out," he commanded, "and watch for sign."

Two more men caught up with him. He was directing them to circle southward when he saw a rider emerge from a mesquite thicket directly ahead of him. In that first instant, as Veto raised his rifle, he thought it was Furlong. His hope was that strong, that overwhelming. But Farley Breen had no ready-recognized Brent Pardee, and called, "What you doing so far from town?"

Brent came on, his clean-shaven face and rather wiry brown eyes revealing his weariness. "We almost caught Furlong," he announced.

"Who's we?" Veto demanded harshly.

"Sid Link and I," Brent explained. "We trailed him from town, lost his tracks on the south fork, then jumped him up there on the ridge."

Veto peered at him in momentary astonishment. "You trailed Jim Furlong from town?" he asked in disbelief.

Brent nodded.

"But what, would Furlong be doing in town?" Veto insisted.

"He didn't whiffed back at the hotel this morning and robbed him of the whole payroll, $1,600."

For a moment, the headquarters crew stared at Brent Pardee as if doubting his sanity. Then Farley Breen exclaimed, "Furlong couldn't have done that. Not this morning!"

"What time was the holdup?" Joe Fenton asked.

"About 9:30."

The men looked at Veto, and Sam Simpson said, "Then it was not Furlong who burned West Camp."

Veto turned to his men. He said, "Circle in toward the ridge, then work south toward the ranch. Not much daylight left. As the men eased off, he added, 'If you see Furlong, start shooting. And shoot to kill.'"

"But be sure it's not Sheriff Link!" Brent cautioned.

Remembering that this son of Jules Pardee had never joined in any of Empire's manhunts, he asked, "How is it that you got in on this deal?"

Brent struggled. "I guess it was the brutal way Furlong attacked my father, while Dad's back was turned. And anyway, part of the stolen money was stagnating payroll." Wryly, as if admitting an obvious thing, he added, "I haven't been on a horse since I left the ranch. I'll be gimped up tomorrow."

Veto didn't seem to hear him. He sat there gazing at the distant ridge, watching the last sunlight fade from its crest. As if thinking aloud, he said, "Furlong knew he was seen. So he rode west just far enough to get out of sight, scrambled up his tracks in the brush, and then went north."

"You think he can be found?" Brent asked.

Veto nodded. "I'll go to the ranch and get fresh horses. Then I'll keep watch on Furlong's neighbors. He will put up with one of them tonight."

It was dark when Furlong found Rule. He said censoriously, "Took you a long time to get back. Where's the cattle?"

Furlong struck a match and found the canteen for him, or serving that Rule's sweat-soaked face was pale, his eyes feverishly bright. When like had finished with the water, Furlong thumbed another match to flame and examined his wound.

Furlong cut a sleeve from the Rules' shirt, fashioned another pad and placed it against the wound. When he helped Rule to his feet, the man couldn't stand alone. So, he decided, wouldn't make it to town.

Furlong said, "I'll have to leave you somewhere."

"Where?"

Furlong thought about it. He disliked to leave Rule with Furlong Lindstrom, but her place was nearest, and even that might be farther than like could stay used. "Do you know Fern Lind-

Faubus Claims Hands Off on Guard Change

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus said yesterday he had laid down three basic rules for the Arkansas Military Department to follow in reorganization of the State National Guard.

In a prepared statement Faubus said he advanced these suggestions:

1. That if possible, no unit should be removed from a town where only one unit exists.

2. That the number of units split between towns should be held to a minimum because shuffling makes both towns ineligible for armories.

3. That unit strength in towns should be kept basically the same.

The military Department said Knob probably would be the only town to lose its guard unit in reorganization.

The reorganization plan drafted by the Military Department is subject to approval by the National Guard Bureau. Approval is expected shortly, the plan shuffles guard units across the state.

President Doing Well With His Golf Game

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—President Eisenhower once mist have wondered whether he ever would be able to golf again. Now he's up to 28 holes in a single day.

It happened Thursday. As far as newsmen know, it's the most he has played in one day since his heart attack in 1955.

The 68-year-old President, playing at the Augusta National Golf Club, traveled by far the greatest part of the two full rounds in his electric golf cart. He reportedly got in lunch and a rest between the rounds.

There was no White House announcement the Eisenhower played 36 holes. The source who reported it said the President seemed to be in good condition at the end of the day. Newsmen are not allowed to accompany the President on his golfing rounds.

On Sept. 23, 1955, the day before he suffered a heart attack in Denver, Eisenhower played 27 holes of golf. He has played 27

How Many New Chances Should She Give Him?

By DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: My wife and I broke up a month ago and I'm trying to win her back so she won't go through with the divorce, which is already in the courts. I know I can be the man she wants me to be if she'll give me one more chance. She has given me many chances before but neither one of us tried very hard and I realize now that marriage isn't a one-way deal. I love my wife and three children, dearly. Most of our trouble was over her folks. Sometimes it looked as if our marriage wasn't a marriage at all but a game between her family and me to see who could outwit the other. We've ranted and raved at each other long enough and now I think it's time to quit. All I know now is that I want my family together. Can you help the five of us out of this mess? PHIL G.

DEAR PHIL: Apparently your wife figures you had been at each other long enough and she decided to quit—the legal way. I'd certainly like to hear her side of the story. Apparently you made it quite rough on her. You always wanted "just one more chance," which is what you're asking for now. How long would it be before you were begging for "another one?" You seem to have run out of chances. You only have now is in the courts. Before a divorce is granted, in most states, the legal mind must do everything possible to mend the marriage. If counselors are available to you and your wife has more confidence than I have in your promises of reform, you may get another try. It's up to you to justify it.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: Within the past year my girl has broken up and returned my girl a six times. She doesn't act like a 15-year-old but more like 10. Every time I get angry at the foolish way she behaves, she acts up. We have an argument and break up. What should I do? CHUCK

DEAR CHUCK: Don't give the ring back until she has grown up a bit, at least in your estimation. Both of you are too young for serious steady dating and the best move at this point would be to circulate.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: I have a suggestion for the lady who was distressed over her daughter's nail biting. Send the girl to the nicest beauty shop available for a professional manicure complete with a becoming shade of polish. A sympathetic operator will do a fancy job on the most "chawed" nails. I found this cured the most persistent nail-biter among my daughter's chums.—H.H.

DEAR H.H.: I'm always glad to receive and pass on suggestions from readers who have solved problems similar to those I print. This is a very good idea and worth the attention of anyone troubled with nail biting.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address her care of this newspaper.

Farmer Is Killed in Tractor Accident

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP)—An Alzheimer farmer was killed when his tractor overturned on him yesterday.

Dead is Nick Frates, 62, who had farmed at Alzheimer since 1927. A former resident of Pine Bluff, he came to this country from Italy as a child.

Witnesses told authorities Frates was trying to free another tractor which had stuck in a cotton field when his machine overturned and pinned him. He was dead on arrival at a Pine Bluff hospital.

Survivors include his widow and a son and daughter.

SOAKED CHILDREN

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP)—A false fire alarm sent pupils at Wiley School scrambling into the rain. They got wet outside when they inside to get dry.

Strike Halts Work on Barton Coliseum

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Picket lines have halted renovation work on Barton Coliseum on the Arkansas Live Stock Show grounds here.

J. B. Dodds, an attorney for the Sheet Metal Workers' Union, said that picketing set up the job because the general contractor, H. C. Enterprises Inc., had refused to abide by some phases of a National Labor Relations Board order awarding certain disputed work to the metal workers.

B. S. Clark, attorney for the contractor, said the dispute involved whether journeymen metal workers, rather than common laborers, would have to be used to carry materials from points delivery at the show grounds to point of installation. He said the NLRB order was not being disregarded.

B. S. Clark said that the contractor had filed a charge of unfair labor practice against the metal workers and that a sub-contractor, W. E. Clark, had filed an other charge in which he alleged a secondary boycott.

All Year These Days Boating's in 'Season'

By WM. TAYLOR McKEOWN
Editor, Popular Boating

(Distributed by NEA Service)
If you are one of the 37 million Americans who went boating last year, you're undoubtedly planning already for the season ahead.

But if you are a member of an even larger group, who are interested in the sport and would like to take part, you're in for a surprise this year.

Now you can get started boating more quickly than ever before. This coming weekend is not too soon to get out in the water.

Time was when a yachtman in the North launched his boat on the 30th of May. Today you will find millions of boatmen "go into commission" by simply backing their cars down to the water's edge and floating off outboard runabouts from trailers. A sunny day any time of the year, any place in the country where the water is not frozen, will now bring out the modern boating family.

No longer can you live somewhere that is too far from the water. This summer will see father, mother, and the younger sailors pack up every weekend for a drive of some 50 or 200 miles to reach a cruising area, and then live aboard full time for a week or 10 during vacation.

Today's experienced boatman will recommend that you study the improved craft now available if you plan to buy your first boat. Applications of wood, plastics, and metal have been markedly improved over the past few years and you will find your choice will be stronger in rough seas, faster over smooth water, and much easier to maintain.

Boatmen in the South who haul out their larger craft this time of year for a spring coat of paint, and Northerners who are doing the same before launching, will both be using new colorful coatings which now incorporate synthetics to lengthen resistance to weather and water. The extra strength of nylon rope, durability of plastic deck fittings, and higher horsepower of outboard and inboard motors are samples of this year's improvements.

If you want to get started with something small for fishing on protected waters, look for a 10 to 14 foot rowboat or runabout, and an outboard for it you can stow in your car trunk. The boat may be light enough to lift and carry on your car top.

Moving out to open water and longer trips offshore? Choose a 16-footer or up, and a little more power. The pleasures of overnight cruises are one target of this year's new designs. As with the past several years, the outboard cruiser seems to be the fastest growing class in popularity. Boating is the sport in which the whole family can participate together. This cruiser, usually 15 to 20 feet overall, is "small enough" to be trailered, and is still large enough for family overnight cruises and may be fast enough besides to pull water skiers.

Next step up is the inboard cruiser, and here you can install a great many of the comforts of home, with only your budget and seagoing ability as limits.

Sailing, too, is enjoying a new surge of popularity. Never before have so many boatmen pitted their skills against the wind. Sailboats are being trailered long distances, and all winter in chilly Northern harbors "Frostbite" sailors have been racing sailing dinghies.

No time of year is out of season any more for the ardent boatman.

HOW TO AVOID TROUBLE CRUISING DOWN A RIVER

By WM. TAYLOR McKEOWN
Editor, Popular Boating

Distributed by NEA Service
Could you guide a towboat and nine loaded barges down the Mississippi? Probably not. But knowing how it is done can make your pleasure boating safer and more fun.

Every large waterway has commercial and recreational traffic, and the boatman who can predict what a skipper of a big ship or two is about to do, can go a long way toward staying out of trouble.

Large vessels create treacherous waves and currents around themselves which the small boat man must understand in order to avoid. New the National Safe Boating Committee, a cooperative group of commercial and pleasure boat officials, is preparing a booklet of hints for the pleasure boat skipper. Here is a preview:

Judge when a tow ahead of you is going to turn. You don't have to be a riverboat pilot like Mark Twain to know that a freighter or a string of barges will start to swing toward a channel or curve in the river before reaching it, and that once they start to turn they are slow to change direction even though you suddenly appear and have the right of way.

The right of way is not enough. You may have the right to cut in front of a group of barges being pushed along, but if the tow boat is behind them the pilot's visibility is restricted and he may not see you.

If you are towing a water skier and he falls in front of the oncoming barges, the skier could be in serious trouble. Even if the pilot saw him in time, it might take the tow half a mile to stop. Review the rules of the road again. Be sure you know what your rights are. If not certain, check with more experienced boatman or write to the Coast Guard in Washington for a copy of the Pilot Rules for your area. If you are passing a big ship for the first time, you may be amazed at the steep bow wave it rolls out. Proceed slowly. Cross the wake at a 45-degree angle.

Barges moored along shore deserve respect. River currents passing under the blunt forward rake of a barge could drag under a small boat, and the eddies swirling out astern could be dangerous.

One final reminder when approaching moored work craft or a tow during times of reduced visibility: mooring lines or tow cables may be partially submerged and out of sight where a careless boatman approaching too close might run into them.

Commercial skippers go out of their way to give pleasure boatmen wide berth and seagoing courtesy. The boating family that returns the favor can have more fun on the water and a safer time.

Mexico Highway 85 stretches for 42 straight miles across each decorated desert to the foothills of the Sierra Madre. Modern luxury in Monterey, Calif., called the Pilsburgh of Mexico, was where we began our tour of children's. Every city, every town has a prize edifice that seems more glorious than the last.

South of Ciudad Victoria you cross the Tropic of Cancer and soon are in the real tropics, lush with coffee and banana trees, sugarcane, corn and exotic flowers. The road drops almost to sea level at times, then climbs high into the mountains. Next is Monte, an agricultural center and the Valles, in the coffee producing region. Worth while is the 34-mile side trip on a hard-surfaced road from Actopan to Tula, ancient capital of the Toltec Indians. The target point is Mexico City, glamour capital of North America (the subject of a future Magic Circle).

While Mexican roads are well traveled by cars, there's a greater traffic of Indians carrying their loads on their shoulders or heads, bicycles, burros, plows with baskets, poultry, straw, corn stalks, sugar cane or kindling wood. I saw cows, sheep, turkeys, pigs, chickens and goats all believe the highway was built for them. More than once we rounded a curve to find the road ahead blocked by animals.

Buses Everywhere

Sometimes there are buses. Sometimes they are fixing a flat tire, or you may come upon four or five spitting along in procession. There are the first class ones that stop only at certain towns and sell only as many tickets as there are seats. The second class buses, capacity unlimited, stop everywhere. There always is room for one more.

You'll want to take some pictures of the third class buses. They take on people, pigs, chickens, dogs, bicycles, pottery, firewood, express and light freight. Wares for market are piled 10 feet on the roof, men and boys hang from the doors, sit on the roof or radiator, stand on bumpers.

From Mexico City you can go back via the central route (Mexico 45) to El Paso, Texas, (1927 miles). But we made it a real Magic Circle tour by returning home via the fascinating western route (Mexico 15) to Nogales (1602 miles), which gave us the opportunity to see Arizona and New Mexico.

When to Fish or Hunt Solunar Tables

By John Alden Knight

The schedule of Solunar Periods, as printed below, has been taken from John Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in good territory, or hunting in good cover during these times. If you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major Periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

to experience market day, an important social event for the Indians. Everyone goes from the oldest to the youngest on his mother's back. All roads are crowded with people carrying their produce. The Toluca market is noted for its baskets.

The mile-high city of Guadalajara is next. Famed in legend and song, this popular tourist city, of ferns and flowers, from all over Mexico. Some of the finest is made within the area.

Visitors are welcome everywhere, from the glass factories to the old churches and modern office buildings. It is easy to understand why this region has become a favorite retirement center for U.S. citizens.

The road cuts across to Mazatlan on the Pacific, then flirts with the ocean through prosperous agricultural land to Guaymas. It is difficult to choose between these two Pacific ports. Both have the fine bays for fishing, the curving beaches embrace the water's edge and there's hunting for wild boar and deer in the hills as well.

Your last look at the Gulf of California is at Guaymas and its beautiful bay, whose blue waters rival the Mediterranean in color.

Matter of Fact

"There stands Jackson like a stone wall. Rally behind the Virginians!" This cry by Gen. Bernard E. Bee at the First Battle of Bull Run early in the War Between the States inspired Bee's men and they sold their line. Thereafter, Col. Thomas T. Jackson of Virginia was "Stonewall" to the Confederacy. When Jackson died, Gen. Robert E. Lee said, "I have lost my right arm."

AFFLICTED—Princess Astrid of Norway is seeking warm weather in the United States to ease the rheumatism she contracted last year. It is believed the 27-year-old Princess will spend her time here in Florida.

PUZZLED?—No, she isn't a fired housewife taking a moment's diversion with a jigsaw puzzle. This inspector is checking master negatives to be used by RCA in printing sealed circuits replacing maze of wires in TV sets. Circuits are etched on stainless steel cloth, then printed on one-piece boards.

REGAL ROMAN—Another Italian addition to Hollywood's glamour gallery is Luciana Pallenzi. A veteran of European films, she'll star in a new TV series, "Five Fingers," this fall.

"Never Man Spake"

...like this Man? John 7:46. Jobe suffered tribulation but he never lost faith. He asked a great question, "If a man die, shall he live again?" The Bible is full of proof in the affirmative. Death must give way to life. In deepest reality there is no death, only transition... the changing from one form of life to another. Spring is the time when Christ arose. Spring is the earth beginning again. It is the time of challenge to women and men to step up their church attendance and support record. It is the time when God called the sun to send her warm rays to awaken the dead earth, to summon new beauty to come forth and cover her brow. It is certainly the time when man puts on new graces of the spirit... love, joy, peace, patience, faith and self-control. Here we hear Him as He welcomes all to a new life in Him... to a new resurrection.
